MONTREAL

© Roosh V

I went to Montreal for one week at the end of October 2012. I focused almost exclusively on French Canadian girls, and not their anglophile counterparts.

I immediately noticed that people here really do believe that French culture is superior to American, so you won't find girls excited about where you are from like you would abroad. While being from America isn't a huge draw (there are already many Americans in the city), it is novel enough that it will give you an extra minute or two of her attention. Overall it's a slightly above-neutral affect.

GIRLS:

The quality is much better than Washington DC, the city I was in before visiting Montreal. Most girls are generally cute and thin. There are lots of 6's and 7's with the occasional 8 and above. They have pouty faces, sexy accents, bangs, and petite bodies. The quality is on par with New York City, but I suspect the proportion of hotter girls there is higher.

The city had more of a hipster vibe (especially if you stay around St. Laurent), reminding me of Scandinavia. Converse shoes and skinny jeans are normal. That's where the similarities end, for Montreal girls are much less reserved than Scandinavian girls and also cockblock less.

I was shocked at how incredibly friendly the women were. One girl chatted me up in the liquor store and other girls smiled at me in bars. Many who did this were in the 7 range. They'd ask me questions and give off invitations for me to approach. As positive as this was, I discovered this is partly due to social politeness and does not necessarily mean that she wants to bang you. You still have to move all interactions forward by touching, building value, and getting her to your place. She won't do it for you.

During the day, you'll feel the "big city vibe" with girls staring straight ahead, walking fast, and making just an average amount of eye contact. Street approaches definitely surprised them a bit, more so than café or night approaches, where you can lock eye contact, give off a smirk, and then get one in return.

Most people in Montreal believe in socialism, so be careful of getting into political discussions or race generalizing. It will be similar to what you experience with white American girls.

DAY:

I couldn't find a European style square so I started doing approaches in the street and underground mall concourse. The girls weren't mean, but they seemed to be in a hurry and I couldn't get them to buckle down for a conversation. I moved on to the cafes, where the response was much better.

Montreal has a great cafe culture where girls go alone with their laptop or tablet, unlike in Europe where girls never go alone. I'm confident that if I lived in Montreal, I probably wouldn't have to go out at night to meet women. The only issue with café game is that it takes time and if you're only in town for 3-7 days, it may be tough for you to score using this method.

To meet women in cafes, it becomes a matter of walking around and poking your head into places to see if it is crowded with tables that are close together. Here are two cafes I like:

Javaart Cafe - Nice logistics for chatting up girls (assuming it's crowded)

Cafe Neve - Another cafe with a communal table

Before 5pm, the quality outside is very low, but once girls get off from work or school, the sidewalks become packed with talent. Walking around aimlessly at this hour, however, makes you put in a lot of time for little reward. By all means approach girls you see on the street, but I found café approaching to be much easier, though with fewer targets.

NIGHT:

Most of the below venues are in the St. Laurent area, which has more college girls and fewer foreigners than the area around Old Port, the flashier, nouveau rich part of the city. One funny thing of partying with the college scene is that you see guys who look like they just got out of puberty making out with girls their age who are really pretty. Good for them.

One downside of the nightlife is that you'll find very large social circles and mixed set groups. Sometimes your best bet will be jumping in for a quick set that results in a number, because isolation for the one-night stand is tough. In many parts of the world I'd wait until the end of the night to go for isolation, but girls in Montreal can get rather drunk to the point that their eyes are rolling in the back of their heads, requiring constant babysitting from their social circle.

Here are some venues I checked out:

Pinq Taco - Urban/salsa venue that had three thirsty guys for every girl. The guys were mostly Spanish and black. Girls were of all races.

Candibar - Small club venue with a candy theme. Had a decent crowd on Wednesday with an equal male to female ratio, though I hear that Salone Officiale is much better for Wednesday nights.

Gogo Lounge - Bar that has a crowd of regulars aged over 25 and up. A lot of people start here for a drink before going somewhere else.

Salone Official - Decent hipster venue with cute girls. It should be crowded starting on Wednesday. The dance floor in the back makes it feel more like a club.

Korovo - College hipster bar that is most crowded on Thursday through Saturday, but also gets busy on Mondays. I felt the crowd was too young but I had my best responses approaching here. The clientele recycles throughout the night so if you stay a while you should see a lot of talent coming through the doors.

Tokyo Bar - I went on hip hop night (Sunday). 70% of the guys were black, 20% were Latino, and the rest were white or Asian. I saw more black girls here than any other venue. The responses were also the coldest out of anywhere in Montreal, though the talent was not the highest. I'd only go here if you are bored on a Sunday night.

Rockette - Hardcore hipster bar that is borderline punk. It had the fattest and sloppiest girls I saw in Montreal. I can usually hold my own in hipster bars but this crossed the line for me. Usually has a scene on Monday and Tuesday nights.

Big In Japan & Reservoir - Cool dates spots where you can take a girl for a couple drinks.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

The city is rather expensive (though less so than Toronto). Even in dive bars you can spend $40 easily without realizing it.

Montreal had a lot of marginal opportunities with 6's. For example you can be in a café ordering a drink, and there is a 6 waiting in line giving you eye contact. Or you are in a supermarket and there is a hipster 6 looking bored trying to decide which granola bar to buy. There are lots of situations you'll encounter where you think, "Hmm do I want to bang her?" Then you see an 8 at night, you're legs are moving in her direction, and you no longer have regret for not approaching the hipster girl.

My sources tell me that I went during the wrong time (late October). It seems to be similar to Scandinavia in that girls enter a sort of pussy hibernation for the winter. I came during the beginning of that hibernation, but it was still acceptable for me so I don't regret my choice.

Are the girls from Montreal cute? Yes. Are they sexy? A bit, thanks to the French influence. Are they feminine? A bit, but less than Eastern Europe. It's a "gender neutral" place, so get ready for girls to say some gender equality craziness that makes your head explode, but as long as you focus on fun topics and do several approaches a night, I think you'll find your visit worthwhile.

TORONTO

GIRLS:

Toronto is one of the worst cities I've been to. You may have already read my thoughts about it in 15 Reasons Why Toronto Is The Worst City In North America For Men.

Due to a confluence of demographic and economic factors, Toronto is not a good city to meet women. It also doesn't help that it's the epicenter of PUA culture, meaning that there are wolfpacks of guys approaching every girl in sight. Women feel highly prized here and are quick to serve up attitude to reasonable men who approach them.

Even if your game is tight, I don't think you'll be satisfied with the level of talent on display, especially when compared to Montreal. The downgrade was quite substantial. The 2am last call and sky-high prices didn't help matters.

You also have logistical issues of meeting girls who live in the suburbs and are sharing rides back home. This kills your one-night stand game. It's very rare to find a girl at the bar who lives within walking distance of her apartment. You either have to hit the packed cheesy club with a bunch of suburban people or take a chance at small bars that, while having more locals, also has far less selection.

On the bright side, Toronto has many independent shops, bars, and holes-in-the-wall. It's not as dominated by chains as Washington DC, but such a benefit does very little to take away the negatives of this city. I got into my bad habit of going out not to get laid, but to troll girls for my entertainment, and then go home and jerk off.

DAY:

I focused on night game instead of day, but I did notice a café culture that, while not as good as Montreal's, does have girls hanging out alone with their electronic devices.

One place I regret not checking out is El Almacen, which serves yerba mate. For those of you that haven't been to South America, it's a traditional Argentine tea that tastes like bitter coffee. I walked by there and did spot girls who looked they were from Argentina.

NIGHT:

Tattoo Rock Parlour - Mainstream bar that attracts a lot of PUAs and lazy hipsters. One of the few places that has a scene on Sunday.

Madison Avenue Pub - PUA central with dozens of guys approaching in rapid fire, especially on Thursday night. Girls are very aloof. You need to bring you're A-game to bang a 5. I think this place should be a tourist attraction to see how the PUAs work their mojo. If you want to get noticed by the girls, do the opposite of what they do.

The Ossington - Decent spot that is best on Thursday, even though the crowd is light. On the weekends it draws in a suburban clientele like all other spots on Ossington Street, which gets my recommendation for the nightlife area with the most tolerable balance of attitude and appearance. It's not heaven, by any means, but I couldn't find anything better.

Levack Block - I went on Saturday night when it was absolutely packed. There was a lot of movement and girls seemed focused on dancing. I didn't get much in the way of warm responses here. Cover is $10 and coat check is $3.

Baby Huey - Hip hop scene that wasn't entirely bad, but it had a similar crowd to The Ossington and Levack Block. All the bars on that street are basically identical on the weekend and if you step into one you step into them all. If I were forced to live in Toronto, I would try these bars on Tuesday-Thursday and then stay home on the weekend organizing my stamp collection.

The Drake - Hotel that has a huge multi-level bar. Tends to attract people older than 25 who want to do it up a bit more classy. You won't find hipsters here. Girls are not exactly warm but you'll find an occasional hottie. Food is good. On the weekends it can be rather packed so come early.

BOTTOM LINE:

I felt that Toronto was a bigger version of DC with a colder vibe and more cockblocking. The talent was slightly higher, but in a city of over 4 million people, it would be hard not to be. The girls get approached a ton and aren't easily impressed, and even if they are, your chance of getting cockblocked is high. You will have to work very hard to get something reasonable. Back to Europe (or Montreal) for me.

CHISINAU, MOLDOVA

© Roosh V

Mockingly referred to as “the asshole of Europe,” landlocked Moldova is looked down upon by its neighbors. With two breakaway republics, a horrible economy, and a culture of corruption, the only thing it has going for it are its women.

GIRLS:

Moldovian girls are very beautiful. A cross between Romania and Russia, you see a wide array of appearances that should satisfy your palate, from sultry brunettes to vixen blondes. Their personalities are more homogenous, resembling an Eastern mindset more than West.

The girls are more friendly during the day than at night, especially young ones under 24 who have not had foreigner experience. With an English penetration rate I’d estimate at around 60%, it was simple to get phone numbers. One strategy is to fish for eye contact when walking around. Just like in Ukraine, if a girl gives you eye contact, your approach will probably be received well. I opened with “Do you speak English?” followed with a tourist question. If a girl answers “Yes” to your English question, chances of getting a number are quite high.

There has been some sex tourism in Chisinau by Turkish and Italian men, so you will receive a guarded response from women who have had sour experiences. With some girls, especially those that go to clubs where foreigners congregate, their jadedness can be sky-high. This is why I recommend day game to meet girls who don’t go to clubs and therefore don’t have that experience, but a cost of this strategy is meeting girls who drink sparingly and are more traditional when it comes to sex.

The sex tourist problem is mild compared to other cities like Riga, Prague, and Kiev, but since the city is small with few nightlife options, it doesn’t take a large influx of foreigners to create a skeptical impression on the women (I’ve repeatedly heard that Moldova was close to poosy paradise about 6 years ago).

Once you go up in quality at night, it can get impossibly hard. The hottest girls may not even respond to your opener, but there are still many 7’s who will give you a chance. Going with a nightlife-only strategy, however, is quite risky if you happen to have a string of bad responses. It was quite surprising to be in a club with more women than men but get more negative responses than positive. This was also true of three other players I spent time with. If there is any city to try for day game, Chisinau is it, because night game alone can leave you frustrated.

I wouldn't come here unless you're willing to spend about 10 days or so, and even this is short if you don't plan on going balls-out with a heavy game effort that sends you over 100 approaches. Unfortunately, for short time periods the game is "find the slut," because even if a Moldovian girl likes you, it will still take time to get her into bed (at least two dates). I found Polish and Romanian women to be slightly easier.

Getting a Moldovian girl into bed is similar to the process in Ukraine. You'll be depending on dates and then venue changing to your place. I found it challenging to get a girl to my pad on weekdays, as there were logistical hurdles in them either having to get up early or catch the last 10pm bus into their suburb. You really should get the kiss by the end of the first date, though this is far from guaranteed (just like in Ukraine). Set the bang date up for the weekend with maybe a simple dinner and then nightcap at your apartment.

One last point is to understand that your backstory is critical. Have fun creating a "business" that brings you to the country because if you mention that you're staying for "vacation" or "tourism," the girl won't take you seriously.

DAY:

During the summer, look no further than the two parks in the center. The best time to sweep them is the late afternoon when girls are returning home after work or school. With just a bit of patience, you will be able to do many approaches on girls who are alone.

One of the best hot spots, surprisingly, is the McDonald's located near Cathedral Park on the main drag (Stefan cel mare 134). Get an ice cream cone and camp out in an outdoor patio. It was pretty amazing how some of the prettiest young girls I found were located there.

Tucano – Chain of cafes that are English friendly and frequented by girls who give massive eye contact to the man who happens to answer his cell phone in English. I met many girls here while barely trying. There are three locations (my favorite is located on Pushkin 15).

Malldova Mall – cleverly named mall that is the city's biggest, but located a hike from the center. It's your best day game option in the winter

NIGHT:

Drive - This club had amazing talent but the attitude was very high. This is based not just on my experience but also three other players I hung out with (one Canadian and two Brazilian). If Brazilian guys with their aggressive game is having trouble, you know something is up. I found that based on equal attractiveness, the girls in Kiev clubs were much more responsive than the girls in this club, which happens to be the best one in the city. But then again, the girls here are more likely to speak English. It's an interesting trade-off that you must weigh, but I will say that I got many numbers here and almost two one-night stands from camping out in the quiet hallway. My results weren't typical.

Coco's - If Drive is the most elite club in the city then Coco's is the most elite lounge. It's across the street from Mojitos, a cafe for rich people where you will see nothing but Mercedes parked in front. The layout of Coco's is not very conducive to approaching, and you'll probably not even be able to get in unless you reserve a table, which is required if you want to get any type of reasonable response from the women. It's a snobby place but the talent level is high.

Déjà vu - This basic club supposedly has a good Latino night on Thursday where girls throw themselves on foreigners, but I didn't get that impression. The talent is average and the club itself was small. There were foreigners and older guys here. Worth just stopping by.

Sensi - This is another lounge that is a step below Coco's. I heard it was a good spot for weekend afterparties, but when I went on a Saturday night at 4am, I saw just a smattering of dudes and people sitting down at tables eating food. I was not impressed.

Activ - I didn't make it to this club but I repeatedly heard it's the best option for Sunday night. It's also supposed to have a decent party on Thursday night.

Rai Project - This outdoor club is only open during the summer (starting around the first week of June). It caters mostly towards bottle service. There can also be concerts that hog the attention of women, who were of above-average quality. Only check it out if there is a DJ instead of a band.

There is a slightly low-brow concentration of clubs near the parks that have a wide range of age and talent level. You'll find hot girls, no doubt, but it's a mixed bag. You can pop in and out of all the venues...

1. Studio - It's a generic large club that is hit or miss.

2. Lava - Located across the street from Studio, it had a higher talent level with a better layout, but you may see some older women.

3. Buzz Time - This is a more casual bar across from Lava and up a flight of stairs. Thursday night is Latino night so it would be good to check it out during that time. Sometimes there is a cover charge.

4. Eli Pili - This is a sit-down bar best suitable for dates. Couchsurfing meetings go down here on Thursday nights.

5. City Club – Located one short block over from the above four, this is very similar to Studio and Lava, but it has a cover. I noticed it had a lot of older foreign guys. Worst of the bunch.

WHERE TO STAY:

There are two parks right in the center. Stay close to these parks if you want to have good logistics. For dates I recommend a simple place like Cafe Nefertiti, which has an outdoor patio with comfortable seating.

The biggest supermarket in the center is Nr. 1, located in the Sun City mini mall (Mitropolit Varlaam St 32,)

BOTTOM LINE:

I was impressed by the beauty of Moldovian girls. They were thin, feminine, pretty, and—under certain circumstances—quite sweet and friendly. But even though the country is poor, and a girl's future prospects dim, they still have a lot of pride. A pretty girl will not throw herself on any foreigner. I think you could do some damage if you come here for two weeks, but if I were to return, I'd stay for at least a month.

LUBLIN, POLAND

© Roosh V

I stayed in this city for three months over the winter. It is a boring town but the universities keep the nightlife somewhat interesting. I wouldn't recommend this city for "beginners" even though the talent level is high, simply because it's harder than everywhere else in Poland except Warsaw.

In spite of the fact that Lublin is off the beaten path, there were a ton of medical students from Canada and the Middle East, along with Erasmus students from Spain. I was actually rather disappointed at the surprisingly high number of foreigners because one of the reasons I came here was to stand out. Obviously, I failed. I lost count how many girls asked me if I was either a med student or part of Erasmus. Just don't be surprised if you hear quite a bit of English when you go out, but thankfully it's still much lower than what you experience in Krakow or Warsaw. On the bright side, most foreigners stay within their clique.

The guy who decides to come here should be a Polish lover at heart, wanting to experience the difference between Western and Eastern parts of the country.

GIRLS:

Lublin was the sixth Polish city I visited. I'm prepared to say it had the highest concentration of pretty college girls in Poland. The overall population is small but the number of university students is high, making it a poosy paradise-lite if you like college Polish girls who have never met an American before.

As Lublin is in the Eastern-most part of Poland, very close to the border of Ukraine, you do get a different set of values than in Western Poland. There are two main differences you need to know: (1) girls are less prone to one-night stands, and (2) over 50% of girls are in some sort of relationship. It's still possible to get one-night stands, and of course some girls will cheat, but these two issues do make progress much slower while increasing the quantity of approaches you must do before something hooks. And forget about meeting girls who are over 23, since most of them have a boyfriend. Therefore Lublin is not a place to go for a quick drive-through. It's more of a city where you need to stay a while.

Ratios at night range from okay to superb. There are a handful of ladies night (see night section), where you'll find more girls than guys. This is the best feature of Lublin.

DAY:

The shopping mall Plaza Lublin has the highest concentration of attractive girls. You'll find two coffee shops, H&M, a food court, bookstore, and a great supermarket. My favorite venues to approach were the supermarket and bookstore. The old square surprisingly doesn't have a lot of girls walking alone. I found more options in the mall.

Kawka – This was my favorite coffee shop, located a block away from Plaza. They would have many lectures and film showings at night, usually around 7pm. You could easily start a conversation with girls who attend these.

Costa – This is a chain coffee shop located on the second floor of Plaza. It has amazing eye candy if you sit staring right into the Tally Weijl store. You won't find hotter in Poland unless you're in a modeling show.

The largest university is Marie Curie, located a few blocks behind Plaza. In the middle of winter, there weren't many targets to be found walking around campus.

NIGHT:

Cream – This club has an amazing ladies night on Wednesday. Girls drink for free only until midnight so be sure to show up as early as you can, preferably before 11pm. There are three rooms with bars and also a quiet lounge area that you can take girls to sit down and talk. I had many memorable nights here, even rolling solo. Too bad the club sucks on the other nights.

Dwa Pietra – This semi-hipster club has a ladies night on Thursday. It's not nearly as good as Cream's, since quality is lower and the crowd is smaller, but you'll find plenty of girls to talk to.

Live Lublin – Formerly known as Fashion club, this huge venue has its ladies night on Friday, which can be hit or miss. I didn't like this club much, but there are pretty women who came here to dance the night away.

Dom Kultury – A large club in the center that has its largest party on Saturday night. It's the city's mainstream venue that draws in a diverse crowd with amateurs and older people who don't go out regularly. There are lots of bar spots you can hang out at, and the ratio isn't bad.

Klub 68 – My least favorite club. It's cavernous, loud, and full of foreigners, but it always seems to have a crowd so it's your option of last resort.

Archiwum – Bit of a downtrodden club in between Plaza and the big university. I didn't care for it, but a lot of students go here and with that young guys who don't have any game.

There are only two date venues that I found suitable, both near Plaza. They are Spirala Blues Bar (Okopowa 9) and Gallery Café (Okopowa 14).

WHERE TO STAY:

You can't go wrong staying anywhere between Plaza Lublin and Old Town. Here's a map. Plaza is north of the big gray rectangle while Old Town is in the top right with the curved roads. Since you will probably have to go on dates, and most date venues are close to Plaza Lublin, staying near the mall is a sound option.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

Lublin has girls that will fuck you but it takes more time to get it in. One-night stands are harder and you will be faced with a more conservative mentality, but once you crack that, you will enjoy some pleasant lovemaking. If you're going to come to this city, definitely don't miss the Wednesday night ladies night, but be warned: if you go when school is out of session, it will seem like a ghost town.

WARSAW

GIRLS:

If I came to Warsaw before first going to Poland's second-tier cities, there probably wouldn't have been a Bang Poland. It's a lackluster city in every respect: it's ugly, the talent is low, and the competition is more intense. The biggest positive about Warsaw is that there is a greater selection of quiet cafes.

The response I got from the Polish girls here was not as warm as I was used to, especially girls older than 23, who you think would be more eager to meet an older foreign man. This served as a reminder to me that whichever country I travel to, it's always the younger girls who are most open to a sexual experience with a foreigner. I also noticed that Polish women tend to hit a wall around 28. While their bodies stay fit, their faces see rapid degradation as their "baby fat" evaporates and reduces the suppleness of their neck, jaw, and cheeks, exaggerating common Polish features of big noses and sharp chins.

While the attitude I received here wasn't worse than Washington DC or Toronto, I saw some shocking behavior in women who would flat-out ignore me when I approached or ask me to buy them a drink. I thought Polish women were universally sweet, but in this capital city environment, they were soured from all the attention they received from Polish guys who were more well-off than in the second tier cities. Being from the USA here only offered a mild benefit.

Understand that everyone is coming here for jobs, including Polish guys re-entering the country from a manual labor stint in Britain. The amount of sausage, especially at night, can be staggering. The girls are being swept up by the changes: smart phones are near universal and there is status-seeking in elite clubs. It's a city on the up and up, which means that being a foreigner here isn't enough to make it "easy" for me like it was in Poznan. Even Krakow was far easier than Warsaw.

The most amazing interaction I had upon my first week was with an adorable French-Argentine girl. This would absolutely not happen in other Polish cities, so if that isn't proof enough that you should avoid Warsaw, I don't know what is. I wouldn't waste more than a weekend of time here. In spite of the downsides, there are some nice girls, but you have to put in strenuous labor to find and game them. Big city logistics will make it tough because chances are she lives halfway across town. Isolation is also hard because groups are larger and cockblocking more prevalent.

The city itself is quite depressing. Just knowing you're in a place that the Nazis completely razed gave it a haunted feel, not helped by the communist-era buildings that only recently are being shadowed by modern skyscrapers. There are also lots of homeless bums and drunks that will approach you constantly.

DAY:

The old town (rebuilt after World War II), is a ways off from the commercial center so I didn't bother, especially since it's mostly for tourists. For casual day game, there are three locations that are all located within walking distance of each other:

1. Złote Tarasy (Golden Terraces). This is a large mall with a mix of teenagers and mature women. It did seem to have a snobby air, since it's technically the richest mall in the country, but there were stunning women walking alone that you could try for an approach. I rather spend three hours here than in a Warsaw nightclub.

2. Centrum Strip Mall. This long strip of upscale shops is located near the Centrum train and subway station. There is an H&M, Zara, bookstore, and other clothing stores that women walk in and out of. Nearby is a Starbucks and other fast food shops. Polish women love this area so I recommend it for an afternoon stroll, but since it's outdoors it will only be good for you in the spring, summer, and fall. I recommend the mammoth Empik bookstore, which also has an arts and crafts section that draws in a lot of young girls.

3. Nowy Świat street. You can't go wrong on this street or the cross street that leads to Centrum (ul. Chmielna). Here you'll find a lot of pedestrian traffic, buskers, restaurants, and cafes. While I always recommend you approach girls who are alone, you will probably also do well with pairs in this area, assuming they are young.

If you are stuck in Warsaw for an extended period of time, I would not hesitate to recommend day game over night. I met a guy who lived in Warsaw who didn't even bother going out at night, but had tremendous success day gaming on Nowy Świat.

NIGHT:

I must reiterate that nightlife in Warsaw sucks. The ratio is bad and the girls are less receptive, but if you're a creature of the night like myself, you'll want to try it out. Here are my thoughts:

Mono Bar – This young club had the hottest girls I saw in Warsaw, even though it's slightly hipster. People come for the house music so be prepared to meet girls drenched in sweat from dancing all night long. The problem is that it's way too loud, without any quiet nooks or crannies. The first hour you can run talking game a bit but after that it becomes real tough, and that's coming from a guy who wears specially designed earplugs to block out the club music. Be prepared to dance.

Shot Bar – A couple doors down to the left of Mono Bar is a shot bar whose name I missed. It's packed with dudes but very occasionally you'll find an approach opportunity or two. The only reason I'm mentioning it is because it's a nice place to get liquored up on the cheap with your buddies. They also have traditional Polish snacks at cheap prices.

Klub Enklawa - Wednesday night is ladies night but you could have fooled me—it seemed more like “cougars and the men who love them” night. It contained the largest collection of ugly Polish women I've seen under one roof. Nonetheless, some guys swear by this place. It may be worth a peak on Wednesday and Thursday night.

Organza – Next to Enklawa, Organza is a small club with young people. You will have approach opportunities here. It's worth a look on the weekdays when most other venues are empty.

Mazowiecka street, which contain the above four venues, have additional clubs that you can browse through. The street reminded me a bit of Adams Morgan in Washington DC. I found that it has more of an amateur feel, especially on the weekends. You're not doing yourself any favors by only staying on this street for Warsaw nightlife.

Hybrydy Club – College club that was moderately enjoyable. The zig-zag bar makes approach logistics a bit weird, but in this area the music won't be ear-splittingly loud. There are also many lounge chairs that you can sit on with a girl you meet to go for the kiss. The entry line can be long after 12, so arrive early on Thursday through Saturday. If I were you, I'd be here 10:30 on Thursday night.

Sketch – This is one of the more upscale bars in Warsaw. Downstairs is mostly a restaurant while upstairs is a club. I have a love/hate relationship with this place because while it's snobby, it tends to have very high talent that makes Warsaw seem not so bad. Come early around 10pm so the doorman doesn't give you trouble (if he does, just lie and say you want to eat dinner). This is the type of venue that Polish people come to in order to feel like they “made it” in the big city. Be prepared for attitude.

Opera – Typical VIP club with generally older chicks and a lot of Spanish people. One of my friends thinks this club is the best thing in the world, but after four visits all I got to experience was massive sausage and low talent.

Platinum – Something of an Opera clone that is one of the more try-hard venues in the city. It's loud as hell and much of the clientele is approaching 30. I suspect some of the girls in the VIP are actually prostitutes.

Zurawina – Nice bar that has Jazz concerts on Wednesday nights. Logistics aren't so great but this would make a fine date spot.

Bistro A La Fourchette – This is an everyman bar that gets packed with professionals after 5pm or so. If you like working women, you may be able to get off an approach or two as you sip Polish vodka. Ratio is still heavily male.

The Secret Garden – There are a bunch of small, cheap pubs behind Nowy Swiat 22. Each pub has maybe one approach opportunity so if you want to give this area a shot, which contains mostly college students, you'd have to do a lot of bouncing around. When the weather is nice, many people hang outside.

Praga Północ – This is a hipster area across the river that attracts college students in big groups. If the big clubs aren't your style, or you're not getting good responses in the center, try here, where your main competitors will be Erasmus students. Visit Sen Pszczoly (Inzynierska 3) or Saturator (11 Listopada 22).

WHERE TO STAY:

The best area to stay in is Nowy Swiat. It's near a lot of small bars and cafes that you can use as date venues. I used Capital Apartments. You can also try P&O. The Marriot hotel is also a nice pick since it's close to the big mall, but a bit of a hike from the nightlife.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

You could launch an missile from an American drone and it will hit a random town in Poland that is easier than Warsaw. On the other hand, the nightlife is quite varied and you will probably find something that you like, but who cares if it's packed with dudes? I guess a weekend here wouldn't kill you, but if you have limited time to stay in Poland, Warsaw is a definite pass.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA

© Roosh V

Romania has a very Latinized feel, with tanned people and dark hair. It had a similar vibe to Colombia, though with less poverty and crime. Romanians are like Italians and Croatians in that they enjoy socializing in cafes and going for promenades (even their language sounds Italian). They are social, warm creatures who enjoy leisure and friendship. The country itself felt like a poor version of Italy, and I don't mean that as an insult. The women are hotter and the prices are cheaper, so I'd easily pick Romania over Italy.

There is a very large population of gypsies, ancestral nomads from India. Their culture involves begging and stealing instead of working, so they are universally looked down upon. People say you shouldn't joke about gypsies, but as long as you are insulting them, Romanians won't mind.

GIRLS:

Most girls have an olive complexion. They are not pale like girls in Poland, Ukraine, or Scandinavia. Their hair is mostly dark, so any blondes you see are likely to be fake (though there are natural light brunettes). In Romania, guys give a 1 point bonus for blondes, meaning those girls will generally feel more prized, though in my experience they were no easier or harder than brunettes. The opposite occurs in Poland, where brunettes are more valued because there are too many blondes.

Eye color is mostly hazelnut, and sometimes you can pick out individual green and brown hues. Many have dark green eyes, along with the guys, which go very well with their dark complexion.

The girls are generally thin (thinner than Poland). It's pretty hard to find a whale, though some girls do have chunky thighs. Their butts are superb and their breasts are well-proportioned. Their bodies are similar to Colombian women.

I'm sure you're wondering what the catch is and here is it: Romanian girls have horrible teeth. Not only are snaggleteeth common but even young girls have brown teeth as if they were 50-year-old men. Times are changing and you do see teenage girls with braces, but if your target range is around 24, be prepared for dental issues, not helped by a culture of chain smoking. If you come to Romania, simply toss good teeth from your shopping list. You actually do get used to it after a while.

When it comes to personality, you have to understand that a Romanian girl immensely cares about what her friends think about her, especially if they are within sight. Social pressure is so immense that a girl rather stop talking to her dream man than endure disapproving looks from her girlfriends. This is why night approaches are going to be tough going, and the bigger the group she's in, the colder she will be. A mere sharp look from her friend will be all it takes for her to stop talking to you. You'll find a huge difference when approaching girls alone during the day time (by my third month in Romania, I just went out for entertainment after already getting numbers from day approaches).

You may get surprising doses of bitchiness, especially in Bucharest, due to an entrenched PUA culture that is unique to Eastern Europe. I had a girl say "Is that a line?" and another say "Is that your excuse to come talk to me?" Most girls don't do this, however, so don't let a bitch change your entire game. Use basic lines without any long-winded scenarios or opinion openers.

The girls are way more affectionate than girls from other Eastern European countries, especially Poland and Ukraine. I had a girl stroking my beard like it was fur just moments after kissing her. They can get giggly and touch-feely after a short period of time.

GAME:

Girls who are 5s or below will be insanely easy. If you're not a complete troll and are from America, you can bang these girls without much work. In the conversations I got into with them, they were asking me personal questions right off the bat. I can understand why many guys would therefore say Romania is easy because your average girl there thinks a foreign man is a great catch, but when you get into the 8 range, your foreigner status barely gets your foot in the door and you'll need to bring in other game strategems. If Romania was the first foreign country I stepped foot in at the age of 26, I have no doubt I'd have sex with dozens of mediocre Romanian women, but now I'm 34 with high standards, so I had to work.

One interesting thing I noticed is that if a Romanian girl really likes you, regardless of her attractiveness level, she will suggest a meetup and ask for your number. And when she does so, she will be less likely to flake. Now I'd say this happened to me only in about 10% of my number closes, but just knowing it can happen means that I always gave the girls an opportunity to chase me instead of going for a rushed close that didn't require her to display interest. Show a lot of value, show you're a great man, and let the girl be worried that she has to make a move lest she lose you. The key is not to be in a rush.

Americans are quite high value in Romania. Locals look up to you, so don't fuck up your game by looking up to them. Be aloof and unimpressed, and let the girls do some of the work. If a girl gives you attitude when you approach, even after speaking English, you should pass. The English should open the door rather quickly, and if it doesn't then you shouldn't waste any time.

DAY GAME:

Don't bother with groups. Because of the social pressure I mentioned, the girls will be cold unless you have a wingman. Your targets should be girls walking alone.

Both indirect and direct game should work fine here. I stuck with indirect game, and then when I was ready to get her number, I gave her a compliment about her "good energy" or "fluent English." As long as she didn't freeze up after the compliment, I knew I was in.

The best time to go day hunting is around 4pm, when you find both school and career girls on the street. After 7pm you start seeing more couples and families spending time together. I liked day game because it was easy to get a lot of numbers, but it does take time to convert those to dates. If you're only in town for a weekend, you'll probably run out of time.

Finding good day spots were tough. The city is loud, polluted, and people seemed to always be in a rush. I tried the Unirea Shopping Center (Pasajul Unirii 1) but the layout was awkward and not conducive to approaches. Old Town had quite a few women during the day but on weekends they were usually in groups. I wish I had better advice for you on this front, but during the week I was there I didn't find a much better option than just randomly walking around the streets. You can also try the University of Bucharest which is close to Old Town. Your opener can be asking for the language faculty.

NIGHT GAME

The noise level of the clubs is pretty insane. I wear ear plugs but even they were weeping. I don't know why it's so much louder here than other countries, but along with the social pressure problem, a prevalence of mixed-set groups, sausage fest ratios, and a girl's desire to dance all night, the clubs can be quite challenging and tiring.

If you meet a girl in a club before 2am, try for a compliance test about 10 minutes in to see if you should continue (e.g., ask her to come to the bar with you or to sit down for a few minutes). If she declines, and she probably will because of her friends, then wrap up the conversation and go for the number.

Don't waste more than 30 minutes for a number. I found that it takes very little to get a number that leads to a date. The worst you can do is focus on one girl the entire night and get cockblocked. Instead, mine numbers and then text them all the next day. Yes, the next day. Girls are distracted by too many options so I only wait one or two days before contacting them to schedule a date. Always feel out her schedule when getting the number so you know when to suggest a date. One thing I do if I meet a girl on Saturday night is suggest a Sunday night date (Romanian girls are always free on Sunday night). Then I would text her around 3pm, a mere 14 hours after meeting her. I had great success with this.

I highly recommend sniping. Identify the girl you want and wait until she's distracted from her group. This is usually when she goes to the bathroom, but it can also be when her friends are momentarily distracted. The goal is to hook her strongly in the first minute, long enough so that she will decline the first cockblock attempt. A five minute conversation is enough to get her out on a date. I literally stalked these girls from a distance and then went for the kill when I sensed a favorable moment that gave me that noninterrupted minute. Most of my club game was waiting around. If you take care to approach girls who are not in the middle of a nine-person epic dance party, you should have good interactions.

My opening line in Romania was, "You look like you speak very very good English." If she says no then buzz off; it's not worth it. If she says yes then remark how you innately knew she spoke good English and that you also speak good English. Ask her how and where she learned it. If she doesn't ask where you're from within a minute, buzz off. Once she asks you what you're doing in Romania, the game begins. Give her a tested backstory and proceed with the seduction.

Unlike most everywhere else, in Romania you'll have better success in night game with late approaches. Early approaching doesn't pay off because her group is hyper alert and the alcohol hasn't yet given her some immunity from social judgement. On the other hand, the ratio gets worse as the night goes on. I find that the sweet spot on weekend nights is around 2am. If you're having a rough night, wait until the club closes (around 5:30am) and look for any girl who isn't with a guy. If she's still in the club at that time but isn't with someone, there's a reason for it.

You have to be perceptive when a Romanian girl wants you to get her number. If you're talking to her in a club and she says it was "nice" meeting you but has to go, your instinct will say she's blowing you off, but it actually means, "I'm going back to my friends now but you should get my number." If she just walks away without saying goodbye, or gives an abrupt "I'm going," then she doesn't want you to get her number.

The game economy here is based more on phone number exchanges than kisses and one-night stands, and the reason you shouldn't be bothered by that is because you can smash on the first date a girl you talked to in the club for only 5 minutes. The name of the game is therefore isolation, because in front of her friends you aren't going to accomplish much. On any night in the club, get at least three numbers and hopefully you'll have two of those come through.

My first two bangs in Romania came from night game, but outside on the street instead of in a club. Both girls were walking alone. This reminded me of Estonia, where I'd pick up girls outside the nightlife center instead of going inside a venue. You will find groups to be a painful hindrance to your goal. Unless you are a dancer and enjoy super loud music and clouds of cigarette smoke, I doubt you will enjoy the nightlife. The best thing you can do is focus on girls who are in only twos or threes without any guys present.

You'll see the guys perform aggressive Brazilian-style game on the dance floor where they grab the girl and try to dance wildly, but this rarely works. As a foreigner you must fly under the radar and keep it casual, getting numbers after displaying value.

Romanian guys are good looking but thin without muscles. They are charming and talkative, but very emotional and tend to display jealous and impulsive behavior. They don't cockblock and they don't seem violent.

DATING:

Get ready to go on a lot of dates. It's somewhat similar to Ukrainian culture where one-night stands are tough going.

If a Romanian girl shows up on a date, you have a very good chance at banging her. Take her to venues where there will be no judgemental eyes and then venue change to your room. You will have to be persistent in your suggestion to share another drink or listen to music at your apartment (always have a bottle of wine ready to go). Understand that all the Romanian girls I brought back had to be heavily convinced to come to my pad, but once there, I killed it. Get in your head how you're going to get her back before you even meet up with her. I wouldn't spend more than three hours in the date venue before suggesting her to come back.

Be careful with your date selection. If you take her to a frou-frou café, she may not want to order alcohol. Shame her into ordering alcohol by asking if she's 13. You can avoid this problem entirely by taking her to a pub where ordering something like juice looks retarded.

You also don't need to kiss her before inviting her back. Some guys say you shouldn't, since she will have plausible deniability, but if I'm in the bar and the girl is leaning over, waiting for me to kiss her, I will do it.

The basic formula for getting laid in Romania is to harvest numbers and then go on dates starting on Sunday. Spend 2-3 hours on that date then ask her to go for a walk that leads to your nearby pad. Once inside your place, let her get comfortable for 15 minutes before starting the bang process.

NIGHT VENUES:

Ratios aren't so great. You see 1.5-3 guys per girl. The good news is that the Romanian guys have surprisingly bad game, in spite of their PUA studies, so you don't have to attack quickly like you would in Warsaw. Still, it's not pleasing to go to a club with more guys than girls, even if those guys are useless.

The main nightlife area is in Old Town, which has dozens of bars and clubs. You can walk around there while asking girls for venue advice. Here are the spots I checked out...

True Social Club – Large venue with decent talent, but the girls are mostly focused around watching the live cover bands.

Vault – Popular club with two floors. Girls are more receptive on weekdays than on the weekend. Recommended.

Vintage – A Bucharest institution that should have a crowd every night of the week. A bit cheesy and downtrodden, but the girls are receptive.

El Dictador – Pseudo-hipster spot that has a great vibe and music, though the ratio and talent can be disappointing. One of the places where music wasn't painfully loud.

Club A – Definite hipster spot with a side bar room that is easy to talk in. The dance floor is dark and smelly. Girls will be receptive, but quality will be low.

Van Gogh - Hip date spot where you can sit close to a girl at a table. Not good for picking up.

Cafepedia - Good date venue with upstairs bar. A few blocks north of Old Town.

It's hard to recommend specific venues because there are so many. It will be a matter of walking around and seeing which place has girls and the logistics you like based on bar layout and noise level. I noticed an equilibrium effect where it was rare for one club to have an awesome ratio while the one across the street had a bad one. The guys here are smart and quickly fill up a place where there are a lot of girls, so that after midnight you don't find advantages when it comes to ratio alone.

The North side of the city has mega clubs like Fratelli, with hotter girls but tougher logistics and bigger groups. For a flag, I think most guys will find Old Town to be easier, but the North side clubs are worth a try.

La Mama is a good restaurant with traditional food and okay prices.

WHERE TO STAY:

The closer to Old Town, the better. Here's a map that shows the location of Vintage, which is in the middle of Old Town: <http://goo.gl/maps/6uSnX>. Now simply go on Airbnb.com or Booking.com and get an apartment as close as possible to this location, and you'll be all set. You can set dates in Old Town then walk back to your apartment to seal the deal.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

I thought the talent in Bucharest was very high, and the girls were quite open to English speakers, but I didn't care for the nightlife. It was too loud and the ratios weren't good enough for me. As long as you follow my advice and mine for numbers, while setting dates starting on Sunday, I don't see why you can't get a bang or two from a week stay. Most Romanian girls will fuck on the first date. Isolation is the name of the game.

CLUJ, ROMANIA

© Roosh V

Cluj (it's full name is Cluj-Napoca) used to be part of the Austrian-Hungarian empire, and somehow Romania got a hold of it. Its demographics are strange because there are tons of Hungarians along with foreign medical and Erasmus students. You're just as likely to hear a foreign language walking down the street as you are Romanian.

GIRLS:

In Cluj you'll find more fair-skinned women than in Bucharest and Iasi. Before getting excited at the prospect of getting a Hungarian flag, understand that those girls are technically born in Romania, so it's possible you can get a Romanian flag via a girl who is genetically Hungarian. You'll also find Moldavian girls, who are the hottest but have colder attitudes and limited English. You can speak Russian with them.

The worst part of Cluj is that I commonly saw guys dating down. I suspected they could do better in other Romanian cities. There seems to be a surplus of tall handsome men compared to Bucharest, so I was average looking in Cluj while slightly above average in the capital.

Since there's a surplus of guys, the competition for women is more intense than Bucharest. You'll find attitudes in women to be less warm, but still warmer than in Anglo countries. If I went to Cluj before Bucharest, I have no doubt that my impression would have been glowingly positive, but compared to Bucharest, it was tougher going with my approaches at night. I felt that I had to rely mostly on day game to get some good interactions going.

You will see a lot of young girls but many are rated 6 and below, and seem to have their pick of attractive guys from Romania, Hungary, Spain, France, and even Germany. It was no surprise that I suffered tough blowouts that was less the case in Bucharest, though it's possible that many girls thought I was a lowly Erasmus student.

The worst part of Cluj is the huge hipster scene, where women were unkempt and sometimes grossly overweight. Most of the student pubs cater to this demographic. On the other end of the spectrum you have high-end snobby clubs, with no middle ground venues containing cute girls who are open. It became very clear to me early on that Cluj would not be a place I'd want to stay for more than a week. The vibe seemed to say, "You have to work hard here to get laid," even though the surplus of universities would suggest otherwise. On the bright side, Americans are super rare here.

DAY:

You can't go wrong with Piata Unirii, which is dead center and often has girls sitting alone on benches. Just do a few circuits around this area and you should be able to get in a few approaches within an hour. Keep it easy on yourself by asking for tourist recommendations or help.

I had some good luck at the Diverta bookstore right off the main square. Simply peek inside and see if there are any girls. Ask them for the book section on learning Romanian. Pepper her with questions on whether the language is difficult or not.

There are a lot of cafes, but the girls go in groups and they're filled with smoke. I couldn't find one to recommend for day game.

The largest supermarket I found is in the small Sora Shopping Center. There is also Iulius Mall which is much bigger but a long walk away from the center.

NIGHT:

The scene here seems to change rapidly so be sure to check out the Cluj Party Guide, which contains a nightly listing of all parties going on. They don't say which party is good or not, but by going to the club's Facebook page and noting the activity, you can make a reasonable guess if there will be a crowd. It would help to note 3 or 4 parties per night on your tourist map and hit them all, opening girls along the way to ask their suggestions.

Phi18 – Go here on Tuesday night, when they have their ladies night. Make sure to arrive early at 10pm because by 12 the ratios begin to go against your favor. The club itself is loud and smokey, but the back has a nook which is a tad less loud than the dance floor.

Janis – There are two hipster bars called Janis, within walking distance of each other. Its specialty is cheap booze and the ugliest girls in Cluj. You really find bottom of the barrel in these joints, but they tend to have people even on off nights. May be worth just a peek.

Flying Circus – Another hipster bar with heavy metal music, but the venue itself is not as dirty as the Janis bars. It's pretty awful, but then again if you like punk or goth girls then this is a good pick.

Club The One (possibly closed) – Small club with a student party on Wednesday night that was quite good. The girls were receptive and wanted to mingle. I went the following two nights and got considerably less love. The back bar had a low volume. If the weather is nice, you can also hang out by the main entrance and hit on girls walking by. Recommended.

After Eight – Thursday night is when they have their big retro party, but it was one of the biggest sausage fests I've seen, with hordes of older guys just taking up space. It's essentially one massive, loud room, and probably the hardest spot to run game. I couldn't bear to stay long.

Kharma – Monday night is when they have their big party, which is supposed to be off the chain, but when I went it was empty.

Bamboo – Supposedly the fanciest club in Cluj that is best on Friday and Saturday night. I didn't make it here but if you want to see the best (and hardest) talent that Cluj has to offer, I imagine they got it. I doubt it will be easier than other spots.

I found that Cluj had some heavy duty sausage fests, but another member on the forum, who went a couple weeks after me, had an entirely different experience. You can read his report here.

And here are two other reports:

<http://www.rooshvforum.com/thread-7850.html>
<http://www.rooshvforum.com/thread-21525.html>

WHERE TO STAY:

Stay in the center at Piata Unirii. Booking.com has a lot of apartment rentals for good prices near this location.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

It's possible that I went to Cluj on an off-week, but I have to say that my experience was negative overall. Also my Romanian friend who lived in Cluj for one year hated it so much that he tried to talk me out of going. My gut instinct is to say that Cluj is fine if you're coming directly from Anglo pussy hell, but it's not the best of what Romania has to offer.

IASI, ROMANIA

© Roosh V

Iasi is a city in the Moldova region of Romania, not to be confused with the Republic of Moldova, a separate country with a similar stock of people but culturally different (due to Soviet influence). Iasi is primarily a university city that is the second largest in the country.

GIRLS:

The girls were arguably more attractive here than in Bucharest and Cluj. The ratio of girls to guys was also somewhat higher, especially during the day when you can see five girls for every guy.

If you've been to Ukraine, you'll get a similar initial vibe here because the women are ultra-feminine. They wear uncomfortable heels in the day and tend to be done up in their best clothing. It's very pleasing on the eyes.

English here is slightly weaker than what you find in Bucharest but still very strong, and it's only the uneducated, older girls who won't be able to communicate with you. While this region is more traditional and conservative than Bucharest, the girls, especially the ones in university, are modernizing very rapidly. The bigger issue with Iasi is that groupings are much tighter than in Bucharest, with high social pressure among females that amplifies nighttime cockblocking.

It is possible to get laid here quickly (I did on my fifth day), but it's not necessarily easy and you have to put in the work, especially since the level of game here among the females is slightly above the Eastern European mean. The girls are either friendly and polite or surprisingly flakey and rude, sometimes alternating between the two extremes. Don't underestimate the girls here, even the young ones who seem angelic and profess never to drink alcohol. You must go for the fast bang because otherwise you will get stuck in text messaging purgatory, unable to seal the deal.

DAY:

Day game is by far the easiest way to meet girls in Iasi. You can step out the door and have opportunities right away. There are four main areas you can approach:

1. Palas Mall – This is one of the most beautiful monuments to capitalism I've stepped foot in. With multiple levels and a huge supermarket that always has women, you can hang out here all day and collect many numbers. There is also a park next door that seems to draw in half of the city when the weather is warm. Palas also contains a dozen cafes in the mall and surrounding the park, making it a great first date location.

2. Julius Mall – Smaller than Palas, this mall is located in the Tudor area near an engineering university. You will see more college girls in this mall than in Palas, but not by a huge degree. The movie theater is a popular date spot.

3. Alexandru Ioan Cuza University – This university has the highest ratio of girls. It's located very close to Copou Park, which also has a few nightlife venues frequented by girls. Go here in the afternoon and ask girls where you can find the language faculty because you are dying to learn Romanian.

4. Bulevardul Ștefan cel Mare și Sfânt. This is a pedestrian walkway that connects the area around Palas Mall to the center square Piața Unirii. The length is half a mile. If you give it a couple laps, you will find many girls that you can approach. I found this area better than the Unirii square, which is a bit on the small side.

The best restaurant is located on the thirteenth floor of Hotel Unirea (Restaurant Panaroma). They serve delicious traditional food with great service. On the bottom floor of the hotel is a spa with swimming pool. I paid about $17 for a 45-minute massage that gave me immense pleasure.

NIGHT:

Underground – This is the most popular hipster bar in town. It's pretty hard to find on your own since you need to go through a series of buildings and then down a spiral staircase, so ask someone on the street for help. I hated it, mostly because of the idiot rockers whipping their necks around on the dance floor, but not all girls are dressed in the hipster style and there are approach opportunities by the bar in spite of the bad ratio. Underground is a great plan B for when you go out from Thursday to Saturday, though it's probably your best bet for Thursday.

Club Zona – This club is a winner (for Iasi standards). It has young girls who look decent along with good bar logistics to make approaching relatively painless. You'll find a lot of girls under 18 here (the age of consent in Romania is 15). Your best bet is to come early because after 1am it turns into a sausage fest. Worth checking out Thursday to Saturday.

Taverna and La Baza – These two bars, located near Underground, are more for big social groups than pickup spots, since most people will be sitting down. I didn't bother with them.

The above four bars are a 5 minute walk from Piata Unirii, located at a square that has a large cube sculpture.

Cafeneaua – This small bar is located right on the main square in Piata Unirii. The bottom floor is a small club that starts to attract a crowd on Thursday night. I also heard there was a karaoke night on Wednesday. I found it too small and social group oriented to do much in the way of approaching.

Embargo – This is a medium-sized club located in the residential district near Moldova Mall. Their best night is on Wednesday, but when I went it was empty. Worth a try since there is nothing else happening on Wednesday night.

Skin – This is the snobbiest, richest club in the city with the hottest girls. The focus seems to be on showing off within the elevated table service area. The ratio is usually bad, since they let any guy in, and waits to get a drink can be painfully long. For this club it's best to wait until after 2am when people are liquored up, for it gets progressively easier as you approach closing time of 5:30am. The girls here are hyper materialistic so be sure to suit up if you want to get good responses. Only open on Friday and Saturday.

Office Lounge – Located alongside the Ramada Hotel, this is the little sister to Skin that attracts the same snobbery but with a slightly older crowd. You'll find married women here going out with their friends to perhaps live out their younger days, and also a lot of Moldovian girls. The English level here is quite poor and I had very little luck picking up, but the club itself is a manageable size with a long bar that is conducive for approaching. In the summer starting in May (after Romanian Easter), the club moves its location to nearby Ciric Lake. Only open on Friday and Saturday.

Copou is the general area around Copou Park that contains the university. There are two spots worth mentioning here, Skye and Academy.

Skye – A large two-floor club with lots of tables. When it's not packed you'll find everyone seated. This is one of those clubs where you should only go if you know it has a good party.

Academy Pub – A pub that turns into a club on the weekend. While there are a lot of tables for sitting, you'll find plenty of girls to approach, and the volume is a bit lower than other venues. It's a good place to start the night, though one downside is that it seems to attract peasant men from the nearby village, so don't expect a lot of class. Seems to be only good on Saturday nights.

Hunters – A student pub relatively close to Skye and Academy. Its best night is Saturday, though it can also have a crowd on Sunday and Tuesday.

Even though Iasi is a student town, the nightlife options before Thursday were rather pathetic, and your best bet is to focus on day game instead of running around trying to find a night crowd. This site gives basic information on the nightlife.

WHERE TO STAY:

I recommend you stay as close to Palas as you can, since you can easily bounce to your pad on dates. The chance of a one-night stand here is low (though possible) so I believe you should set the logistics up for first date bangs instead of club bangs. Taxis here are cheap so it won't hurt your wallet to take them to night venues if need be.

Booking.com has only one apartment company. I went with this agency: <http://www.iasi-apartment.com/>.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

Iasi is a pleasant city with loads of attractive women who speak English, but the nightlife sucks. You will find it hard to get fast bangs with pretty girls and instead have to resort to day game and dating. Therefore it's hard to recommend this city for just a weekend. You are looking at a two-week minimum to really enjoy what this city has to offer. While the nightlife in Bucharest was more varied and busy, I can't say that the ratio there was any better. It's probably a marginal call either way, but if you like day game, Iasi will be a good choice.

KIEV, UKRAINE

© Roosh V

I was only in Kiev for three nights so consider this a “light” datasheet.

Just like in Kharkov, which I wrote about in Bang Ukraine, logistics are hard to pin down. Yes, you can stay right in the center at Independence Square (Maidan Nezalezhnosti), but the venues nearby will be visited by foreigners and girls who are semi-pros. Other bars and clubs are spaced quite far apart so get ready to blow a lot of cash on taxis and entry fees. If you don't know how to speak Russian with taxi drivers to negotiate fares, you'll be paying the gringo price. Don't be surprised if your weekend in Kiev ends up costing you more than a weekend in a Western city like New York or Miami.

GIRLS:

If you have no Eastern Europe experience, and by Eastern Europe I mean Latvia, Lithuania, Belarus, and Russia, you will be taken for a ride by the women here, and that's okay. You need to learn how it works, and each time you get “tricked” you will gain the needed experience to understand what it takes to succeed in this part of the world. I came to Kiev after three months in Kharkov, so I already knew the deal, and ended up helping a fellow American from getting stuck with the bill when a girl was ready to order everything she saw on a sushi menu. The learning curve is steep and painful, but it's part of the process that you can't escape unless you have extensive experience with Russian girls back in the USA.

It's important to have a backstory for women you meet in Kiev. Their receptiveness increases ten fold if you dress sharp and have a story that you're in town for business with hints of long-term intentions. I think a short trip without knowing Russian or having a solid backstory is okay for research purposes, but don't expect to pull unless you've heavily pipelined on a VK.com, Ukraine Date, or Mamba. Keep in mind that guys who got laid in Ukraine from a short stay all did it through internet dating, which has its own set of pitfalls. If you think one weekend (and perhaps two) is enough to get laid from just night game, you may be in for a surprise.

The sex tourist issue for Kiev has been overblown. If you go to the sex tourist bars every night then yeah, it's a problem, but the nightlife is quite diverse and if you take the risk in going off the beaten path then you can be the only foreigner in the club. Even in the mainstream venues I was able to visit, I was quite pleased with the reactions girls were giving me. You could easily get 2 or 3 numbers a night with casual approaching for dating. I hear one-night stands are possible in Kiev, but it seems more of a luck thing than a regular occurrence.

DAY:

I didn't do any day approaches, though my first stop would be Independence square. Night game is fruitful since the ratios stay good through the night, so my guess is you'll spend your days resting or getting ready for early evening dates.

NIGHT:

I visited three venues...

Vodka Bar – This is a popular club located opposite Independence Square with a crowd every night. Girls who go here will expect some foreigners to interact with them, especially on weekdays where you'll find prostitutes and the Turkish men who love them. On Friday and Saturday you should expect a more normal crowd, but outside of that you will still see some semi-pros. If you have no Ukraine experience, you will have trouble spotting the difference. The club itself is loud and arranged in a semi-circle, but approaching was manageable.

Shooters – Sunday night is ladies night, but face control can be intense. I don't think there's much of a point to try unless you know someone or will buy a table. I heard that you should absolutely not go on other nights, as it attracts a lot of prostitutes.

Divan – This is a hipster bar that attracts average girls (by Ukrainian standards). You'll get a lot of eye contact here and the girls seem open, but most people will be sitting down. It's not a bad place to warm up.

I hear the highest talent is located in Deluxe (pronounce de-loosh) and Buddha Bar, but they are not easy. Forsage was also recommended to me.

WHERE TO STAY:

Staying close to Independence Square is your best bet so that you can venue change dates to your pad, but when it comes to going out, you will probably have to hop in taxis.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

I need to do more research on Kiev, but I was pleasantly pleased with my visit in spite of the fact that I went to the obvious club that had semi pros. Girls in Kiev were very pretty, had at least a basic grasp of English, and received foreigners well if they appeared to be of means. My experience was completely different than when I was in Kharkov and meeting girls who didn't speak English and weren't at all that interested in me. It's contradictory, since you'd think that Kharkov girls, who are more poor, would also be more eager to meet a foreign guy, but I was received more warmly in Kiev during three days than Kharkov in three months.

ODESSA, UKRAINE

© Roosh V

Odessa is perhaps the most beautiful city in Ukraine, and one that is most livable. The city center is pleasant, the restaurants can be excellent (but not the service), and the women are beautiful. It's a popular destination for tourists not only from other parts of the world, particularly Turkey, but also Ukraine itself and Russia. Locals are so proud of Odessa they've nicknamed it "Mama." While I would not hesitate to recommend the city for sightseeing and relaxation, I would give pause to doing so for a man who wants to come and get laid.

GIRLS:

The local girls have been spoiled. Odessa is no secret to foreign men, and you probably already know that it's the mail-order bride capital of the world, with planeloads of older Western men coming to meet girls they have been chatting with on the internet. In spite of that fact, the local Odessa girls are still easier to lay than the tourist girls that come for a few days during the summer.

The tourist girls, usually from Kiev, travel with their friends, sometimes with guys. You would think that the girls would be easier than the locals to set up a possible one-night stand, but this is not the case. In Ukraine you need two or three dates to seal the deal, but the tourist girls don't stay long enough to make that happen. Every time I have gone after a tourist girl (I stayed in Odessa for the entire summer), I came to regret it. The common pattern was simply running out of time before fornication could be achieved.

The local girls are fair prospects as long as you are ready to put in the two or three dates. You can already suspect that a longer period of time, at least two weeks, is required to get a bang, especially if you don't use the internet, which is stocked with scammer girls who like to use foreign men for drinks and dinners. To think that you will come to Odessa for one week and bang some easy tourist from the club will probably result in failure. Can it happen? Yes. Have I heard it happening? Yes. But it's not the rule. The logistics will be hard because the summer clubs in the Arkadia area is a couple miles away from the center, and over 50% of the girls don't speak English, a noticeably lower rate than in Kiev. Russian goes a long way here.

Assuming that Odessa girls are your best option, which I believe they are, another problem is that there are less of them that remain in the summer. They still exist in high numbers, but the tourists start to drown them out, and when you do meet a local girl, she thinks you are a tourist and therefore won't take you as seriously. This is why if you insist on coming to Odessa, it's best to come in the off season.

One additional note concerns the taxi drivers: the closer the taxi is stationed to a club, the higher the fare will be. Walk a bit away and watch as the price drops as much as 80%. You can also pick up a gypsy cab (unlicensed driver with no taxi signage) without fear of getting robbed.

DAY:

Whether you come to Odessa in the summer or not, my recommendation for this city is balls-to-the-wall day game. It bears very good fruit compared to night game. Simply walk around the center (close to the City Garden and Deribasovskaya Street), and approach lone girls with a tourist question. If she speaks English and stays chatting with you for a few minutes, you can go direct by telling her a compliment and then asking if she wants to meet for a drink some time.

Plug day prospects into your date pipeline, be prepared to go on three dates for sex, and that's that. I make it sound easier than it is, but the easiest way in Odessa to get laid is through day approaches. Most girls don't go to the club so if she's single, she will be quite open to meeting you.

The street is the best venue to approach, because the cafes are not of the Starbucks variety and supermarkets are mostly tiny. There is one mall in the center near Greek Square (Hretska ploshcha) that may have opportunities. Odessa has many universities, but unfortunately there aren't campuses in the American style. Instead, academic buildings are simply plopped down in random parts of the city.

Put in the time to walk around and find your targets. Success in Odessa comes down to a matter of day work.

NIGHT:

The nightlife in Odessa sucks big donkey balls. Even in the summer, when the city is bustling with tourists, you will not find a good party outside of the weekend, and the party you do find will be tough to get laid from. There are surprisingly few options that aren't poor. The three best summer clubs are as follows:

Ibiza – Located in Arkadia (a beach to the south of the center), Ibiza is guaranteed to have the hottest women. The club itself is large and quite beautiful with several bars, stage dancers, huge outdoor area, and a pier that is great for isolating a girl. The problem is that the girls are snobbiest here out of every other venue, and the level of English is low. Most of the girls are tourists. Nonetheless, it's a great choice for Friday and Saturday night (Thursday and Sunday nights may have only slight crowds). Ibiza is one of those clubs that you have to come to at least once. Cover is $15 and up.

Itaka – Also located in Arkadia, Itaka is sort of like a smaller Ibiza with a focus on popular stage performances. You'll find an older and uglier crowd, but they will be more welcome to your approach. I found the logistics of this club to be much harder than Ibiza. Cover is around $15 (depends on the event).

True Man Hot Boat – This is a live rock n' roll club with local girls who like foreigners and speak English. The catch is that they are more hipster than average and of lower quality, but still at a much higher standard than Western women. The club is merely okay but there are plenty of targets. If you don't speak Russian then you should come here. Party is best on Saturday night, but Friday can also be good. It's quite hard to find as it doesn't have a specific address (it's located on Dolphin Beach, slightly north from Arkadia). Cover is $5.

If you want to party between Monday through Wednesday... too bad. There is nothing going on.

Starting at the end of September, Arkadia shuts down and the nightlife moves back to the center. The action remains a weekend-only affair. Here are some options:

Captain Morgan's Bar – During the summer this loud bar attracts mostly scammers and old foreign men, but afterwards it becomes a local elite scene with decent talent. It's hard to pick up in since the attitude is high. Cover is $10.

Skaf (Греческая 32) – Awfully hipster bar that gets busy on Friday and Saturday. The quality is low and the girls are very average, but the English level is high and it's the easiest place to get a one-night stand in Odessa. Effortless approaches can be done in front of the bar by asking for a cigarette.

True Man Music Club – They have an indoor location in the center that is popular when the boat location is closed. Very similar to Skaf.

Palladium – Large fancy club on the outskirts of the center. You can try here on the weekend. Dress up.

And that's pretty much it. Odessa has a lot more venues, but the others I've been to, including a horrible gay bar, were so crappy that it's not even worth writing about them. While I've lived in cities with nightlife that was worse, I found it hard to believe that a city of Odessa's size can have so few good venues. What a disappointment.

WHERE TO STAY:

If you're coming outside of the summer season (late July to early September), stay in the center as close as possible to the City Garden.

It's a harder decision if you're coming in the summer. If Ukraine was a country that had a normal frequency of one-night stands, then you should stay in Arkadia and go to Ibiza every night, but Ukraine is not such a country. Then again, unless you plan on staying for at least two weeks, the benefits of staying in the center, with all the nice cafes and restaurants for taking girls on dates, won't help you.

My advice is this: if you're staying for a week or less, get a place near Arkadia. If you're staying for two weeks or more, stay in the center. For time points in between, let a coin toss decide your fate.

The best sites to get an apartment are Airbnb, Booking.com, and Doba.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

The girls take time to bang, the nightlife sucks, and English proficiency is low. On the other hand, the city is pretty and very livable. Odessa is a fine destination for a short trip in the summer to sight-see and relax, but not much more than that.
